

Dear Friends,

Thank you for giving me an opportunity to write in support of Joseph Asch in his candidacy for the Dartmouth College Board of Trustees. Joe has been a dear supporter of Chabad at Dartmouth and my personal friend since 2005. He has been an invaluable ally and advisor, especially on initiatives that engage the entire Dartmouth community. I've spent many hours at Shabbat dinner and over coffee with Joe, talking about everything from sports and our children to our thoughts on how the College can provide the best undergraduate experience in the world.

I can confidently say that I know of no alumnus more involved with the College on a daily basis than Joe. Thirty years after his graduation, Joe is more aware about what's happening on campus than most students and faculty - and probably knows more students personally than any alumnus.

Joe is a sharp and prolific commentator on the state of the College. While oftentimes controversial, his commentary always expresses his deep desire to promote positive change at the College he clearly loves so much. It's hard to match Joe's knowledge of Dartmouth and concern for its future. I have no doubt in my mind that he would make a valuable asset to the Dartmouth Board of Trustees.

Sincerely,

Rabbi Moshe L. Gray
